

Views on modern piobaireachd.

Pipers Persuasion interview compilation.

Allan Hamilton

Pipers Persuasion has been going since 2010 and this week I completed filming the 57th interview – Iain MacDonald of Nielson. We are going to be going to the National Piping Centre and filming some of their collection of bagpipes. This year I was very fortunate in securing interviews with Iain MacInnes and Gary West, and the last interview I completed and put up on the site was with Robert Wallace. So I commend all these interviews for your viewing.

I have for this morning's presentation a compilation of various speakers speaking on the subjects of the piobaireachd of Donald MacLeod and John MacLellan as examples of recently composed piobaireachd. So, while their views are taken slightly out of context I would ask you to go back and see the complete interviews to get a true reflection of what these good people had to say rather than the snatches that I am about to present to you.

Without further ado I think that I am going to press the magic button and hope that everything works.
